The Seattle District's Environmental Resources Section (ERS) provides technical advice and environmental leadership on District projects such as ecosystem restoration, flood control, navigation, dam and lock operations, military construction, environmental remediation, and emergency management. We also ensure that Seattle District projects comply with existing environmental laws and policies. Our staff includes national and regional experts in fisheries and wildlife management, wetland science, restoration ecology, and cultural resource management. This web site is intended to describe our projects, provide access to the documents we produce, and foster communication between the Corps and the public.
